It is not acceptable to allow huge profit-making companies to dump pesticides and cancer-causing poisons into our rivers for years and then dump the responsibility for cleaning it up on innocent taxpaying citizens. The Willamette must be restored by dredging out the poisons and making the corporations pay for the expense of making it clean.

Those of us living along the shores of the Willamette River should be able to catch and eat the salmon that travel through the city on their way to their spawning destinations. We should be able to swim in the water without fear of becoming ill. Our children should be able to play along the beaches without our worrying about their health.

Force the polluters to pay for their crimes against our habitat.
